So I told my wife to put away the things whilst I loaded my rifle, which, as soon as she had done, she took my arm, and we walked down to the deer. They laid under a clump of trees as the day was very hot. My wife and I were dressed in black, as she had lately buried her only sister. We put them up and moved them about so as to get a fine buck out clear, and as soon as I had a good chance I shot at him and knocked him down. A man happened to be coming down the public path at the time whom I sent to the house for a scratch, which, as soon as he...
