Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Lectures on Explosives Short historical sketch of manufacture and use of explosives. Comparatively little change or progress made until about fifty years ago; since then, great and varied development. Field of available bodies and mixtures as explosives greatly widened by introduction of detonators. General considerations of the character of explosive decompositions. Two modes of explosion: Combustion or deflagration and Detonation. Means of initiating each mode. Velocity of explosion wave in detonated explosives. Conditions under which the result of an explosive decomposition can be foreseen from theory; conditions which interfere with theoretical conclusions and necessitate experimental determination. Limitations of experimental methods. Heat developed, volume and composition of gases and pressure produced. Effect of pressure on composition of gases. Theoretical temperature reached on explosion. Experimental attempts to measure it. Need for further work. Sensitiveness of explosives: means of increasing or diminishing it. Consideration of certain types of explosives in general use. Qualities which they should possess. Methods of testing explosives. General description of Rules and Regulations prescribed by the Explosive Department of the Home Office for the construction and working of explosive factories. Description of processes and plant used in the manufacture of the principal explosives. Military propellants and the conditions which they have to fulfil. Sporting powders: General characteristics. Permitted explosives for use in fiery coal mines, and the Home Office Test which they have to pass. Recent filling material for shells. Novel application of explosives. Scope of the chemist's work in connection with explosives. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
